Such challenges earmark your professional career and personal identity. It is here that mentoring from public health experts can bolster your professional self-esteem, competences and career path.

The Andrija Stampar Summer School offers an exclusive educational mentoring programme tailored to initiate such fruitful learning experiences!

Instead of a classical school, participants are asked to present a professional public health challenge or experience, which is followed by a mentoring session to untangle and solve the problem(s) presented. By its very nature, peer learning takes place and is strengthened with profound mentoring assistance from experts of recognized European and global prestige in public health and health systems.
